James Suckling, of JamesSuckling.com, Blueberries, blackberries and oyster shell.

Medium to full body, firm and silky tannins and a fruity finish. Drink now.

Dan Berger, Vintage Experiences: 2013 Ron Rubin Pinot Noir, Green Valley of Russian River Valley ($40): ... does the winery proud by allowing the wine enough time to knit all of its flavors. The aroma of red cherries and a faint underbrush note contribute to its aromatic complexity, and the succulence you get in the entry is balanced in the finish by good acidity. Should be better in 3 to 5 more years, and a relative bargain considering the pricing for so many Western Sonoma County Pinot Noirs. EXCEPTIONAL

Catherine Fallis MS, aka Grape Goddess®: 2013 Ron Rubin Green Valley of Russian River Valley Pinot Noir: Recommends "Ripe and fresh with notes of raspberry liqueur, dark cherry, button mushroom, mint, pecan and chestnut and ripe peach on the finish."

Mary Cressler, Vindulge: 2013 Ron Rubin Pinot Noir, Green Valley of Russian River Valley ($40) ~ The first thing Sean said when he tasted this wine was, "This tastes very familiar. Almost Oregon-ish." Now I know most California winemakers probably don't want to be compared to Oregon, but that's a true compliment coming from this [Oregon] house where CA Pinot was once synonymous with overripe, high alcohol, intensity. This has a fun hint of funk/earth (I like to call it the "Pinot funk") with rich just ripe cranberry, cherry, and blueberry. We really appreciated the balance of funkiness and red berry fruit balanced. And for this price you don't find many balanced and interesting Pinots in this range.
